POWER OF CHURCH AND ITS MISSION

WAS DR. BEATON'S TOPIC AT FIRST MEETING OF WEEK OF PRAYER.

CHURCH PROBLEM PRACTICAL

Christian Sects All Have Unlified Humanity for Their Purpose—Greater Catholicity Needed.

At the first meeting of the week of prayer at the Presbyterian church last evening, Dr. Beaton delivered an address filled with practical wisdom regarding present day Christianity and its application to the needs of all men and classes. His subject was "The Mission and Power of the Church," and he emphasized the fact in spite of the many divisions of the Protestant church there is very little difference in their fundamental aims and doctrine. Dr. Beaton spoke in part as follows:

"The protestant church is sometimes criticized because of its many divisions, but I want to emphasize the fact that they are on the surface. When we get down to the practical things concerning religion there remains only the difference that exists between thinking men on great themes. The recent meeting of all the protestant churches at Edinburgh to consider the spread of the gospel of Christianity in the heathen world, demonstrated the fact that their purpose was a common one and what over their superficial differences in doctrine, they all had the welfare of the human race at heart.

"Officially the Episcopalians are not represented in the meeting tonight, nor are the Lutherans; and I wonder why the Episcopalians and why the Lutherans don't meet with us. We don't come together because we believe the same things theologically or sacramentally, but because we are all interested in the same duties and teachings. At a recent meeting of the Episcopal church at London it was declared that the Anglican church needed to unite with other bodies of the Christian church and work with them for the advancement of missions.

"The mission of the church today is to indicate the catholicity of its great interests. Catholicity means universality, and the church emphasizes the Catholic truth that all men are subject to God's mercy and care. The church is interested in everything that you are interested in. The mission of the church is not confined to theological doctrines and forms alone, but it is interested in our affairs whether at business or pleasure; are ambitious and purposes, are its concerns, and there is none of our plans in which the church is not vitally interested. That's catholicity and the modern Christian church is catholic.

"The problems of the modern church are practical problems. In any of the protestant churches of the city you will find the same trend of thinking, the same problems to be solved. They are alike concerned in our social well-being, in our religious uplift, in education, in the present burdens of life under the stress of the high cost of living. Everywhere the viewpoint is of the man on the street. We ministers know what the practical things of life mean; we know that our grandchildren may be victims of the social vices which are threatening at the present time.

"Our children attend the public schools and we are vitally interested in the public school system. We have to preach things that you know and things that you can criticize. To save men is the mission of the church whether in the realm, in business, or at the skating rink, everywhere and anywhere. We are concerned with human life as Jesus was, and as the prophets were; it is nothing new.

"And what is the church's power? Not in coercion; not in social ostracism. All we can do today is to persuade men in the name of reason, and God's mercy, and in the name of Christ, and in a practical way instill into them the spirit of the eternal God. The power of the Christian church is the power of reason, of mercy, of reason, and of love through the infinite spirit of grace which comes to us through Jesus Christ.

"The church is a natural auxiliary to life to make our homes sacred, our hearts pure, to recreate us and make all our deluges the integral part of our daily life."

SAYS STATE AIDED HIM IN BUSINESS

OH Inspector Said to Have Admitted "Sponging on State."

(Special to THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Jan. 4.—Secretary of State Frear has given out the contents of a document upon which he based his hope that the suit of OH Inspector Tracy against him, to compel him to admit a bill of $121.29 for office rent and expenses in Milwaukee, will result in defeat for Tracy. This was a transcription of the testimony given under oath by Mr. Tracy on Saturday on examination by the secretary of state, under a statute giving the right of such examination to the secretary when the latter wishes to inquire into a bill presented for his approval. The testimony occupies several pages and goes into some detail as to Mr. Tracy's use of the office for his state work and also as a headquarters for a private detective agency. Finally, in response to a question by Secretary Frear, Mr. Tracy testified:

"I admit that I have been sponging on the state for my private business."

SEEK AGREEMENT AS TO SETTLING SUITS

Legislative Committee Wants Matters Decided Before They Make Their Report.

(Special to THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Jan. 4.—How to reach an agreement with several of the larger railroads operating in Wisconsin, by which over $1,000,000 in back taxes can be collected, is the problem which confronts a special committee of the 1909 legislature, which held a meeting here today. The committee consists of former Senator George B. Hildahl of Superior, Senator W. C. Owen (holdovers) of Madison, Rock, and former Assemblymen M. J. Cleary of Blanchardville, Levi H. Bancroft of Rhedland Center and Lawrence W. Ledvina of Manitowish. As Mr. Bancroft is now attorney general, it is anticipated that he no longer will serve with the committee.

This body was appointed at the last session of the legislature to effect an examination of the books of the Chicago & Northwestern, "Omaha," Chicago & St. Paul and "Seo" railroads, to ascertain just how much money in the form of back taxes is due the state as a result of the failure of those railroads properly to report their gross earnings in the years prior to 1903. In that year the "ad valorem" tax went into effect and the state immediately started suit for taxes alleged to be due under the old license fee system. Some of the smaller roads paid up without opposing the suits, but the larger roads resisted, and a little over a year ago the supreme court held that the state authorities could go no farther back than six years, under the statute of limitations, in making claims for back taxes.

Since the legislative committee was appointed, Prof. Stephen W. Gilman of the University of Wisconsin has completed an investigation of the books of the companies affected, and the committee is now required to make a report to the legislature of its labors. Under the court's decision, there remains about $1,000,000 in controversy.

WORLD WIDE SEARCH FOR WOMAN'S HEIRS

(By EXTRA PRESS.)

Fond du Lac, Jan. 4.—R. N. Elliott of Cornersville, Indiana visited Fond du Lac today on the last lap of a hunt for a group of eighty-four heirs of Margaret Shields, an unmarried and eighty years old woman who died intestate in the Hoosier city. The search is one that has been prosecuted around the entire world extending from China to New York and having heirs in nearly every state in the union. The heirs sought here are five sons and daughter of Marcus Woods, an early day Fond du Lac physician. No trace of them could be found. The estate is valued at $50,000.

CHASE COWS FROM PUMPKINS

Maine Farmer Discovers Reason for Dairy Animals Fighting Shy of Fodder.

Bangor, Me.—The prolific Northampton county pumpkin crop is distinguished this year by the pumpkins running extremely small in size. One redeeming feature, however, housewives report, is their extraordinary sweetness and that they make the best pumpkin pies ever.

Cows are crazy for the pumpkins, hence when Joseph Trace of Upper Mount Bethel township noticed his herd was not eating the pumpkin fodder cut up in golden yellow slices and thrown over the fence to them, he had several gloomy days wondering what he would do with the 20 wagon loads he had hauled in off his corn fields.

Not until a close look was taken the other day was the mystery solved. With a whistle of surprise he disappeared around the corner of the house to the apary and entered the kitchen a few minutes later carrying a couple of chunks of spongy yellow stuff, which led Mrs. Trace to ask where he got the stuff.

"This isn't cheese," he explained. "This is why the cows won't eat this year's pumpkins. I'm going to town, right away and file a patent on the original Northampton-county pumpkin honey. That's what!"

HOBBLE SKIRT JOKE

Parisian Designers Got Idea From Cleverly Drawn Cartoon.

Cartoonist Now Apologizes, Declaring Never Thought Such Mode of Dress Possible—Intended to Ridicule Low Waist.

London.—Who is responsible for the invention of the "hobble" skirt? Some famous fashion creator of Paris, every one will say, by no means. W. K. Inghelton, the cartoonist, evolved it out of his inner consciousness many months before it was actually created as a dress.

On Feb. 14, 1909, he thought of it as a hideous possibility which might some day come true. The next day his conception of it appeared as a cartoon, in company with other products of his imagination; later a Parisian fashion expert saw the cartoon and seized upon the idea.

Some months later the "hobble" skirt appeared in Paris, and in December, 1909, was actually being worn in London, and specially became the rage.

In one or two cases enthusiastic adopters of it were so overzealous that they had hobble skirts made for them which were so tight they prevented their getting in or out of vehicles, and broken bones resulted.

Other weird dress designs were "the knee-and elbow-room dress," a quaint conceit which showed balloons round the knees and elbows; the "Punchinellos pattern," the woman in this case wearing an artificial hump and a very voluminous skirt; "the donkey's ear shawl," an ordinary costume with a trailing skirt and two long, pointed projections rising from the shoulders to a distance of three feet above either side of the head; and "the pyramid" and the "diamond" design.

These have not "come true," but Mr. Inghelton thinks it highly likely that their day will dawn. Asked upon what lines he worked when creating such fashions, he said:

"I think of all the most outlandish things in the way of dress, being at the same time assured that nothing is too impossible for women to wear.

"Indeed, the real difficulty is to invent anything that looks impossible. There was one really sensible thing I invented. This will not, I fear, 'come true,' because it is sensible. I refer to the pneumatic hat for matinees, a drawing of which appeared on Aug. 29, 1908.

"It was a large hat blown up with air and capable of being deflated when the wearer had taken her seat in the theater.

"I am afraid that if I designed a really artistic and useful dress women would not wear it.

"The very last thing on earth I wanted was to get women to wear hobble skirts, but I had a fear. I did not think it unlikely that they would adopt it. It is so very silly, you know.

"When I read of the lady, who, owing to a very hobble skirt, broke one of her legs in getting into a taxicab, I felt indirectly responsible. I kept silent about my invention because I did not wish to be found out.

"I am very penitent. I know I ought to be broken on the wheel. If any other man had done it I would get up a society to have him broken on the wheel. But I will not get up a society to have myself broken on the wheel. That is for other people to do.

"At present, you know, we are going back to eastern dress fashions. The thing now is to hide the face and show the figure. You can't see more of a woman's face nowadays than her chin. Breaking on the wheels is quite conformable with eastern ideas."

With the five Winner brothers in the casts, the various productions of this capable dramatic organization are pleasing crowded houses at the Myers theatre this week. This evening "The Man of Her Choice" is the offering, and tomorrow evening "Dutch Blockhead" will be given. The Winner brothers—Charles, Adolf, John, Joe and Frank, have made an enviable name for themselves in the production of attractions for several seasons past. Until this season they have not been all together in one company, but have had two separate shows on the road. Now they are together again and they prove to be finished and polished actors. They have with them a well balanced company of players who add to the productions materially.

BOY BANDIT ROBS JEWELRY STORE

ARRESTED AND ADMITS CRIME

Confesses Fast College Life, Too Much Society and Poker Made Payment of Debts Impossible, Hence His Crime.

Marion, O., Jan. 4.—Robert P. Crist, 19 years old, a fresh man at the Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware, and Phil Kappa Psi fraternity member, is locked up in the county jail here charged with a daring daylight robbery.

A tall, nice looking chap, with a fair complexion and wearing swaggar college togs, entered the south Main street jewelry store of George T. Howers, Mr. Howers and his wife had gone to lunch, leaving Miss Ethel Krause, a clerk, alone in the store. Seizing the girl by the arm and pointing a revolver in her face, the young man compelled her to get for him a small tray containing diamonds valued at $5,000. With the revolver still leveled at her, the youth made Miss Krause retreat a dozen steps to the cash register.

"Get me $2 out of there," he commanded. "That's all I want." The young woman obeyed. Placing the diamond tray in his overcoat pocket and the two silver dollars in his trousers, the boy backed out of the front door with the warning: "I'll kill you, if you give an alarm."

Miss Krause, screaming "thief," ran to the sidewalk. Pointing his gun at several pedestrians and threatening to shoot, the robber fled down an alley. He surrendered after running three squares.

Crist, in his confession to the police, says fast college life, too much society and poker forced him to borrow money, and having lived beyond his means he was unable to pay his debts. The young man's home is at Nicholasville, Ky.

CHAUFFEUR WEDS HERESS

Arthur Woodcock Makes Daughter of Millionaire His Bride.

Greenwich, Conn., Jan. 4.—Interest has followed the announcement made of the marriage of Mary Augustine Smith, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Smith, to Arthur Woodcock, chauffeur for Mr. J. H. Converse, of New York. Mr. Smith is a millionaire.

The marriage took place at Fort Chester on May 11 last. Rev. Father Malloy, who married the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, the latter Miss Elsie Moore, married Mr. Woodcock and Miss Smith at his parochial residence. The shock to the girl's parents was great, but it was announced that they had forgiven the pair, and would do all in their power to make the future bright.

It is the purpose of the commission to keep in closer touch with the minors. While a schedule has not yet been completed, it is understood that the two major leagues will open April 12 and close Oct. 8. Garry Herrman was re-elected chairman, and John C. Bruce was re-elected secretary.

AT THE PLAY HOUSES

JOHN WINNINGER, The Winninger Bros. Co.

The Janesville theatre goes will have what will prove a big bidder for public patronage this week, and its attraction is to be Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's great story, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Although as a result of some cheap productions touring the country this famous play has received ridicule at times, still under capable conscientious management as that of Leon W. Washburn's organization it will ever have the power to make its admirers feel the beauty and pathos of its lines. The Washburn Company, known for years to the public as Statson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin Co." has a larger combination this year than ever—two Toppies, two Marks, a pair of magnificent scenery for the stage, and the grandest Street Parade ever given by any theatrical company.

Everyone who has seen "Baby Mine" knows the ingenious story it tells of the pseudo father and the three babies that he finds are not his own, and there is therefore no need to retell it to those who are to see this brilliant farce—which has been hailed as a laughter festival—when it comes back to the Myers Theatre on Monday, January 23 with the same company that made its previous so welcome on the occasion of its last visit to Janesville. Zola, Jimmy and Alfie are not strangers here and the inquiries at the Myers Theatre are indications, according to Manager Myers that "Baby Mine" will be greeted by the largest house ever seen in Janesville to witness a performance of a farce. "Baby Mine" is the current bill at Daly's Theatre, New York, and New Yorkers are aware of its presence for some time. It is well to remember that seats for the return engagement of "Baby Mine" at the Myers Theatre go on sale Jan. 19.

TWO SENATORIAL FIGHTS PROMISED

Foss is making against him.
Townsend To Be Elected.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 4.—The Michigan legislature convened today for its regular biennial session. It is generally expected that the session will be marked by considerable legislation of a progressive character. The income tax and the corporation tax are among the important matters that will receive attention. The election of a United States senator to succeed Julius C. Burrows will be little more than a formality, as the primary law makes it incumbent upon the legislature to elect Congressman Charles Townsend, who defeated Senator Burrows in the primaries last fall.

Democrats in Control.
Augusta, Me., Jan. 4.—With the Democrats in control for the first time in many years, the Maine legislature convened for its seventy-fifth session today in the remodeled capitol building. Interest in the early days of the session will center in the election of a Democrat to succeed Eugene Hale in the United States senate. Charles F. Johnson, a lawyer of Waterville, continues to be the leading candidate for the senatorship and his election is generally predicted.

In New Hampshire.
Concord, N. H., Jan. 4.—The New Hampshire legislature met today and organized for its biennial session. No United States senator is to be elected this year. Tomorrow both houses will attend the inauguration of Governor Bass.

Do you remember the good old cough cure mother used to have? It didn't taste like cherry pie but it did cure a cough in a hurry. Mr. Pfenning, our Graduate Pharmacist and Chemist, makes our cough balsam by percolation direct from the roots, bark and barks of wild cherry, bloodroot, lobelia, white pine bark. Thoroughly obtaining the full medicinal virtue and strength of each drug, making it into a syrup we call Badger Cough Balsam. It is made under an old prescription which is today the best cure for any cough, bronchial or lung trouble, healing and soothing to the irritated throat and lungs, it cures by assisting to expel the phlegm from the lungs, not by dosing the system with morphine and chloroform as do the modern patent cough remedies, deadening the nervous system, stupefying the lungs into retaining the mucus, thereby bringing on possible pneumonia and pleurisy. Badger Cough Balsam is a trustworthy expectorant, it loosens up and expels the phlegm. Get a bottle today for yourself or the children. It's safe in every case. Badger Drug Co., Milwaukee, 25c. THE LITTLE HUGENOT.

There appeared, a few days ago, on the editorial page of the New York American, an article on Senator La Follette, as "the little Huguenot from Wisconsin," written by Alfred Henry Lewis, who predicts that the senator aspires to become the leader of the United States senate. The analysis of Mr. La Follette as a man and as a leader and organizer, is so true to life that it will be read with interest by Wisconsin people. Whether his ambitions will be realized, time alone will determine. The writer says:

"Consider Mr. La Follette for his strain and fashion as a man. It may aid you in concluding whether I am right or wrong in saying he will one day rule the senate.

"To Mr. La Follette the world breaks into two classes—his followers and his foes. At that, he doesn't lead; he drives, and walks behind his people so as to make them fight beneath his eye. Let one show weakness and he beats him down. For he holds failure to be the highest form of treason. In his soldierly skill for organization, in his unflinching egoism that never hides and seems to be concealed, Mr. La Follette is another Napoleon. Formed to crush but not to conciliate, he will never fall by virtue—or vice—of any sympathies, nor find defeat because he failed to strike. He will run no risks which he can force the foe to take. No other warned upon his heart will ever fang him, since he invites no one to the heartstone of his confidence. He likes mountains, delights in precipices. Mountains veed out the weak, who fall exhausted by the wayside, while precipices are as so many open chances to push overboard an enemy. He will never over-estimate a foe. Therein lies the golden secret of all military success. Under-estimate him. To over-estimate the foe loses battles, to under-estimate him wins them.

"The La Follette motive is ambition. He fights money, not from principle, but as a method, as Aaron Burr fought money. It is the short cut to a following. Likewise it pleases him to fight money. He hates it for its insolence and because his effort is to make slaves of men. His effort is to turn men into soldiers. The separation between Mr. La Follette and money is radical and not to be looks for power; money looks for profit. It is the difference between a paladin and a pawnbroker. Had Tacitus known the La Follettes, he would have said of them, as he said of the Germans: 'Others go to battle; these go to war.'

"There you have the fashion of man who has set out to be master of the senate. He will take every advantage which the enemy offers. He will come, and keep coming. They will never be rid of him, now he has found the passage through the Senate Alps. Nothing short of the enemy's utter surrender will satisfy this Brennus.

"In climbing the ladder of office, Mr. La Follette fought his way up rung by rung. He fought Senator Sawyer, fought Senator Spooner. Mr. Sawyer died; Mr. Spooner grew weary. There still was Mr. La Follette, an ironclad and as blood hungry as one of Wisconsin's own black timber wolves.

"Mr. La Follette has a square, smooth, hard, indomitable face. It is the face of one who has seen trouble, is looking for more trouble, and would be unhappy if he didn't find trouble. His eyes are level, hard, steady, unblinking. There is no mercy, no kindness, no generosity, but a mighty resolution second only to a mightier egotism in those eyes. They never laugh, they never weep, they never waver, they never yield. And they are always glancing about for something to claim, something to take possession of, something to go to war over.

"Mr. La Follette is money honest. He wouldn't touch a dollar with a stain on it. Also, he doesn't care for money; doesn't banker to be rich. Mr. La Follette wants only the power. Of more power he will never have enough. Also, in his power hunt, he has no friendships. A David without a Jonathan, a Pythias without a Damon, is Huguenot La Follette, one day to be a Caesar of the Senate."

THE POSTAL SAVING BANKS.
The popularity of the new postal saving bank was evidenced yesterday when one in each state was opened for business. It is estimated that 60 per cent of the circulating medium is not in circulation. Much of it is hid away in stockings and a large amount deposited in safety vaults. This is due to lack of confidence, as many people are skeptical and regard all men as dishonest.

As soon as the postal banks are generally established, this great block of money in hiding will come to the surface and flow out through the channels of trade. There would have been no money panic in 1907 if money in hiding had been kept in circulation.

People have confidence in a government deposit, the same as they have in a government bond, and the small rate of interest paid by the postal banks will encourage small savings on the part of children and young people who would not become patrons of a regular bank.

One of the first depositors at Pekin, Illinois, where a bank was opened yesterday, was a boy with 20 cents. He bought stamps to paste on a card and when he has secured a dollar's worth an account will be opened with him.

Another patron was a woman who lost $1,000 a year ago by having it burned up in a stove which she had been using for a safety deposit vault.

There will be no large depositors as the most that can be deposited in a month, to a single name, is $100, and the limit for a year is $500.

The present congress will provide an appropriation sufficient to establish these postal banks in all parts of the country, and before the year closes they should be in full swing.

The government issued last year 78,500,000 postoffice money orders, representing $775,000,000. Many of the orders were laid away for safe keeping, thus retarding a large amount of currency from circulation. The postal savings banks will keep this kind of money active.

Rockford defeated the commission plan of government yesterday, by a large majority, while Rock Island adopted it. The Rockford voters claimed that the law was defective, but this was simply an excuse, the same as it was in Juneville a year ago.

Poor Socrates abandoned hope. They brought to him the hemlock dose, and said: "Take this, and swallow; and if a good four-finger drink should fall to put you on the blink, there's plenty of more to follow." He took the law's commands, "I perish at the law's commands," he said, in accents solemn; "and when I've cashed my pile of chips I hope the Daily Greek Ecclips will give me half a column. When first the coppers ran me in, I thought such treatment was a sin, and I was sore as thunder; and when they said that I must croak, I thought at first it was a joke, and could but sit and wonder. But now, ere I return to dust, I want to say the law is just, and strictly on the level; for I, my friends, when I was loose, in monologues on things astruse, was wont to fairly revel. I loafed around this one-horse town and talked the whole caboodle down, and asked men foolish questions; I bothered and bothered their brains, and filled their breasts with pea-green pains and quains and indignations. While I've been sitting here in heck I've thought that I had pounded rock, fate might not now be chilly; but all my days I pushed my face and lungs around men place to place, and talked a talk and silly. So now I take a willow waught of this old hemlock, smoking hot, and face death's gloomy chain; so let the kodak men come near—reporters, there's a table here—now for the dying spasm!"

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

LOOKING BACKWARD.

Do you remember the legend about that ancient Greek from whom Apollo took the backward looking mind?

All things became now to the Greek. The world was transformed. For the first time he saw the beauty of the earth. The sunshine was brighter than before; the birds sang more sweetly; the changing seasons filled him with delight. Flowers he had not seen bloomed beneath his feet and now stars shone over his head.

Why the change? It was not in the earth. It remained the same. It was in the Greek. His mind had been turned forever backward to the happiness of the past, but now, looking outward and forward, he saw the joy and the beauty that was about him.

In our day there is no Apollo to take away from mortals the backward looking mind.

But the symbolism holds. Many are the moderns who need to have the burden loosened—a burden strange to say, mostly self imposed.

I know a woman who persists in looking backward and who always tells of a day when her people were rich and were accustomed to many luxuries she is now denied. She is constantly deploring a situation she cannot help and living in a former day. She is worse than Lot's wife, who took only one backward glance; she always faces backward.

I know a man whose constant theme of deep regret is that he ever changed his business. He was doing well, he says, at the old place and was a fool to change. And he is doing no good at his new business because he forever is looking back to the old.

He needs an Apollo. Old persons are apt to cultivate the backward looking mind. Only those who keep the youthful point of view despite advancing years know themselves against it. Says grandpa from his chimney corner, "There are no days like the good old days." Poor grandpa! He magnifies the past, minimizes the present and omits the future. He is dying, like a tree, at the top.

Beware the backward looking mind. You cannot change the past, whatever it may have been, whether beautiful or otherwise, but you can discount the present and ruin the future by refusing to live in the one and to face the other.

To be successful, to stay young, to find happiness, cultivate the outward looking, the forward looking mind. When you stand with your back to the sun your shadow is in front of you; face the sun and the shadow is behind.

COUNTY BOARD IS SOLVING PROBLEM

FORMER REGISTER OF DEEDS WEIRICK GIVES THEM LEGAL QUESTION.

ANNUAL JANUARY SESSION

Promises to Be Enlivened by Much Discussion As to Stand Taken by Retiring County Official.

If the members of the county board thought that their troubles over the register of deeds office were to end with the retirement of Charles Weirick, who gave up his office January 2, they found out their mistake today when that former official made a report to the county board at the opening session of their January meeting. Mr. Weirick, it will be remembered, was plaintiff in a suit brought by the county board to stop his copying the records of his office in books which he purchased for that purpose, with a view of opening an abstract of title suit court and then taking to the supreme court where a decision favorable to Mr. Weirick was rendered. It now appears that Mr. Weirick had no contract with the board relative to his compensation for his duties as register of deeds for the past year. Consequently Mr. Weirick has failed to turn over the fees for recording papers and holds it in lieu of salary. He states in his report that he drew his salary for the first three months while acting under an error, but since then has not touched the money due him in the county treasurer's office—$150 per month.

The affair has created considerable excitement among the county board members as the fees withheld by the retiring official amount to something over a thousand dollars more than his salary would have been if drawn per month. It is expected that a special committee will be named to make a thorough investigation of the matter and the legal steps will be then taken to seek to recover the money thus withheld.

As Danne county has had a similar case pending in its courts for the past year and the register of deeds there claims to have good grounds for withholding such fees, it is possible that Weirick acted as he did upon legal advice. The matter will come up for discussion tomorrow and will doubtless attract much attention.

Thirty-seven of the supervisors were present when the session came to order. Sup. W. E. Shumaker being the only one absent. K. K. Nowhouse succeeds former Supervisor S. S. Jones, now county superintendent of highways.

Reports of various county officers were first taken up, those of County Superintendent of P. O. of the northern district, and of the southern district by George Seegmiller being read and referred by Chairman J. A. Paul to Committee No. 14. The reports of County Clerk Howard W. Lee and Clerk of Court Jesse Earle for the year past, recording receipts and disbursements, were read and referred to Committee No. 9.

COREY RESIGNS AS STEEL PRESIDENT

Tenders Resignation to Take Effect at Pleasure of Board.

CHAIRMAN GARY'S STATEMENT

Election of Successor to Mr. Corey May Not Occur Soon, If at All—Leaves Corporation With Best Wishes of Officers.

New York, Jan. 4.—Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, issued this statement: "After more than seven years of faithful service as president of the United States Steel corporation, Mr. William E. Corey has tendered his resignation, to take effect at the pleasure of the board of directors. The resignation will be presented to the board for consideration in due time, and the finance committee will then present its recommendations concerning the subject matter.

"It is the opinion of the members of the finance committee that there should not be elected a successor as president in the immediate future, if at all. The experience and talents of Mr. Corey have been fitted him to take charge of the manufacturing and commercial departments, and his attention has been largely confined to that service. However, as the manufacturing companies are all thoroughly equipped with the very best talent, including such as the above mentioned branches need, the strength of the organization will not be diminished. The finance committee may recommend the election of a vice president or two vice presidents who will be expected to take special charge of different departments, and it is intended to strengthen the whole organization in every respect, practical and useful.

"The relations between Mr. Corey and the members of the board, and of the finance committee respectively, as well as all the officers of the United States Steel corporation and subsidiary companies have been most pleasant and agreeable. Mr. Corey severs his connection with a feeling of loyalty to, and friendship for the corporation and its interests, and the best wishes of all who are connected with the companies above referred to."

SEEKS DEATH IN ROAD

Woman Prostrates Self in Front of Several Automobiles.

When Arrested She Screamed "I Want to Die, I Want to Die"—Believed Victim of Suicidal Mania.

New York, Jan. 4. — Automobiles on their way to and from Williamsburg bridge who had to make the sharp turn at the fountain, Bedford and Division avenues, Brooklyn, were scared out of several years' growth by a young woman who persisted in throwing herself directly in the path of their heavy cars.

The woman would stand close to the curb until a machine drove in sight, and then running forward would stretch herself out on the muddy asphalt. This occurred no less than a half dozen times in an hour.

Two policemen were sent to the fountain, and they found the young woman covered with mud and her body a mass of bruises waiting for another automobile to become her juggernaut. When they took hold of her she screamed: "I want to die, I want to die."

She resisted the police and fought them all the way to the station, two blocks away. She was so violent that an ambulance was summoned from the Eastern District hospital. Dr. Levin said she was a victim of suicidal mania. She gave her name as Mrs. Lena Cohen.

J., Jan. 4.—Mrs. Garrett Morrell, of Hopewell, put on her husband's overcoat, placed two flatirons in the pockets, tied a bag of coal around her neck, stuffed cotton wool in her ears, nose and mouth and jumped into a cistern. Her dead body was found some time later. She left a note to her husband saying: "Don't worry, it's my head." She was discharged from McKinley hospital in this city on Christmas day, having been a sufferer from a nervous breakdown.

NEGRO BOY SAVES TRAIN

Builds Bonfire Near Washed Out Trestle and Flings Passenger.

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 4.—News received here from Georgetown, Miss., says that the southbound passenger train on the New Orleans Great Northern railroad there narrowly escaped being wrecked at Copiah Creek trestle, about a mile south. The creek was swollen from the recent rains, and the heavy timbers coming down had torn out the piling of the bridge, leaving the rails and cross ties suspended in midair.

Charlie Bush, a negro, who lives near the bridge, discovered the danger just before the train was due, built a bonfire in the center of the track and flung the train.

A BIG ESTATE FOR UNCLE JOE

Bombay, India, Bankers Notify Illinois Man of Inheritance.

ESTATE VALUED AT $2,500,000

Speaker Views News With Skepticism—Dials of Request Said to Have Been Kindness Done by Mr. Cannon Long Ago.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Speaker Cannon has received a letter from King, King & Co., bankers, of Bombay, India, notifying him that a woman client of theirs, whose name is mentioned in the letter, having been warned by her physicians that she had less than six months to live, had deposited with them her will for execution upon her death in which Joseph G. Cannon, of Danville, Ill., is made sole heir to an estate valued at five hundred thousand pounds—approximately $2,500,000. Mr. Cannon seems to view the news with some skepticism, although there seems to be no particular reason why any one in Bombay should endeavor to perpetrate a long distance joke of this kind upon the sage of Danville.

The legacy, according to the letter of notification, does not drop on Uncle Joe out of a clear sky, without rhyme or reason. It is explained that many years ago Mr. Cannon, then a hard working member of the rank and file of the house of representatives, did a favor, as the letter expresses it, "a great deed of kindness" for a man then poor and struggling, from whom he could have expected no return. That man went to India, worked hard, made investments, was fortunate and accumulated a great estate. Upon his death he left his entire estate to King, King & Co.'s client for life with the stipulation that upon her death it was to revert to Mr. Cannon.

The present possessor of the fortune, the letter explains, has suffered from an incurable disease for years and was recently told by her physicians that her case was hopeless and that she could not live longer than six months at the most. Consequently it is explained she immediately made her will and deposited it with King, King & Co., in Bombay, where she is at present living. The notification came to the speaker in due course.

Steps will be taken at once to ascertain whether or not the communication is genuine and the facts concerning the fortune as stated. In the meantime Speaker Cannon is curdling his brains trying to think of some one among the many people for whom he has done favors in his many years of public service who might be grateful enough to reciprocate by making him heir to an immense fortune.

HANGS SELF IN JAIL CELL

Millard Estep's "Joke" Ends in Tragic Climax.

Coroner's Jury Returns Verdict of "Accidental Suicide" in Case of Man Who Played Joke on Mate.

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 4.—A verdict of "accidental suicide" was returned by the coroner's jury here in the case of Millard Estep, a young man who hanged himself in his cell at the county jail. Estep, who had been sent up as a vag, was a practical joker, and several days ago frightened his cell mate by pretending to hang himself, and when his companion had summoned aid by frightened calls for help, deliberately loosened the chain from around his neck and stood laughing at the crowd at his cell door.

So much did the prisoner enjoy this escapade that he determined to try it again, but this time his companion failed to respond to his pleas for help, and the chain became tangled in such a manner that he could not release himself. In the course of half an hour his cellmate became alarmed and summoned the jailer, who found the prisoner dead.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

"MOTHER and father were so disappointed to miss your visit. They want me to tell you to come again soon when THEY are home." I heard one young girl say to another the other day.

I don't know the girl addressed but from that sentence I'm sure I should like to.

For it meant she was the kind of girl mothers and fathers enjoy and I think that is no light recommendation of character.

"Everybody liked her. Not just her young friends, but all the older people, too."

Once in a while you hear that old about some young girl and I think it is one of the highest compliments that can be paid. It is so easy when you are young and your life is crowded and rich to have time only for other young people whose lives are also crowded and rich and to forget about the older people with their paler existences.

And it is so beautiful not to forget.

It doesn't cost anything to remember always to say "Good night" to your hostess' father and mother.

It doesn't take much time to always send your love or some little message to them when you write.

It doesn't take any very great effort to chat with your friend's mother about the topics that you know from companionship with your own mother will interest her.

It can't possibly mean as much to you as it does to her wonderful pleasure to have for you to call on the mother and father of the child who is married or may be "gone away."

It's so easy if you just make it a habit to run in once in a while on the lonely old maid or childless mother and tell them about your good time, show them your new treasure, make them laugh over your funny mishap, galvanize them with the current of your youth.

Little things all in the doing but big in their meaning to someone. Little investments but sure to bring vast returns in love and gratitude.

Ask yourself these three questions for me, little sister:

If your hostess' father and mother were away, would they be sorry to have missed your visit?

If you were ill would some older folks as well as your young friends be sorry?

If you should go away would they say of you, "Everybody liked her. Not just her young friends but all the older people, too?"

Remember the Little Foxes.

Just as the bride was leaving her father's house for the honeymoon trip, the mother gathered her to her breast, and as she intimated a long, lingering kiss on her lips, said, "Remember, dear, it is the little foxes that destroy the vine."

What better warning could a loving mother have given the daughter who had surrendered into the keeping of another? It was something more than a hint to the girl that very much of her married happiness would depend upon herself.

"The little foxes destroy the vine"—how true it is! The little worries and disagreements destroy the peace and happiness of life. Keep the little foxes away, and the vine of happiness will not fail to flourish.

Nearly every disagreement the world has known has grown out of some small, inconsequential difference of opinion or misunderstanding. Hold on nearly every case that comes to the divorce court is a series of differences that had their beginning in a first misunderstanding, that if an effort to explain had been made on the part of either husband or wife, might have cleared away doubt and there would have been no bitterness afterwards.

Some one allowed the little foxes to get in. Was it the wife, or was it the husband? Was it the wife who formed the habit of magnifying every little circumstance until she ruined the husband's power of endurance? Was it the detestable habit of nagging she formed? Was it her jealous suspicion of his attitude towards all other women, or was the cause reserved, and the nagging and the jealousy a part of the husband's folly?

Who left the gate open so that the little foxes got in?

Who forgot that married life is a partnership as much as anything else, in which the partners must understand each other and be willing to occasionally apologize when there is occasion for apology? Who forgot that matrimony is a partnership and that the rights of the partners are equal, and that the possessions of a successful partnership of the kind are domestic comfort and domestic felicity? Who forgot that the burdens as well as the joys of the partnership must be equally shared, as in a partnership of the business world the debts as well as the profits are to be equally shared?

If some one on an unlucky day hadn't allowed an opening for the little foxes, the domestic vine wouldn't now be slowly dying and losing all of its attractiveness.

Who let in the little foxes?

BEWARE OF MUCH PROTEIN

An excess of protein is to be avoided, more than of the other elements of food, because while a certain proportion is required for the formation of tissue, varying from ten to twenty per cent, according to age and condition, an excess of albumen imposes a severe strain upon the kidneys, particularly being largely the cause of the high mortality from kidney diseases in England and America, where too much meat, especially, is eaten. The foods which contain most protein are: Fish, 35 per cent; beef, 30; cheese, 28; peanut butter, 28; walnuts, 28; mutton, 25; ham, 25; beans, 25; eggs, 15; chicken, 19; macaroni, 13; cereals, 10.

It is the things that are under our feet that we have mastered of good and evil.

Home Nursing.

The sickroom is the first to need attention and thought. It is not always possible to choose the most suitable room for the sick one; but when it is possible, have it as far from noise and on the first floor, have the stairs climbing. In cases of infectious diseases, one on the top floor, as far as possible from the members of the family is a desirable location.

A single bed is much easier for the nurse to care for a patient in, also a room with a bare floor and as little furniture as possible to need care and moving about. All needless bric-a-brac and drapery only holds dust and is thus a menace to health. A rocking chair is often a great annoyance to a sick person, as the constant motion is often very irritating to a nervous patient.

Bright pictures on the walls, washable curtains at the windows, flowers and books may make a sickroom attractive and comfortable.

For a person lying all day in bed, there is nothing so restful as several small pillows which may be put under the knees or shoulder or feet, thus serving to change the position and give the needed rest. These pillows may be stuffed with wool or hair or down.

If a rubber sheet is used, it is now goes on and then draw a sheet doubled in the middle or width of the rubber and firmly tucked in. The object of the draw sheet is that it may be changed without disturbing the patient, and it keeps the under sheet clean.

A good margin should be folded back over this blanket when putting on the top sheet. Avoid wrinkles, crumbs and anything that might cause bed sores on a patient. When the supply of bed linen is limited the upper sheet, which is often on a wrinkled, may be used as a draw sheet. The pillow slips used in the day time may be altered and used again. Sunshine is a great germ destroyer. See that the bedding is sunned and aired often.

GORGEOUS BLACK AND WHITE TOILETTE.

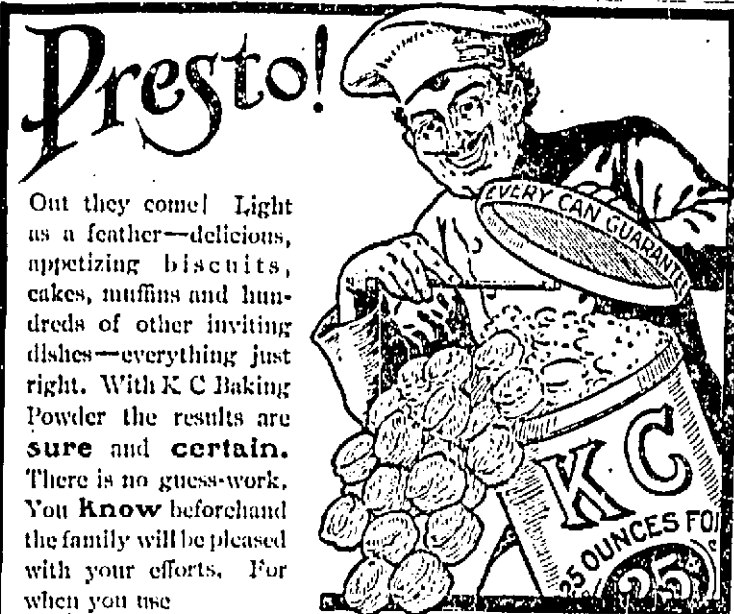

Truly this is a velvet season, and one sees it worked up into every sort of costume, but none are so perfectly beautiful as the evening gowns. A stunning example is portrayed by our artist in accompanying sketch which shows a skirt of black panne velvet, wonderfully draped on slender and veiled with a white lace tulle. The bodice of white net and lace is trimmed with broad bands over shoulders and deep folds of black velvet joined to them in jumper fashion.

Good Form

Women who are polite in practically all other places sometimes are positively rude at card tables. It would perhaps help them to be self-controlled and civil when the game is going against them to remember that, after all, it is only a game and, though they lose, their defeat is only temporary.

However different one may be in fact when one is losing, and few persons are as interested when the cards are against them, it is a matter of good breeding to pretend as much enjoyment as when success is on her side. It is not polite to be snappy and dull just because one is losing. Such conduct makes the winning couple extremely uncomfortable.

Courtesy, at all times desirable, at cards should be regarded as imperative. To comment unfavorably upon the playing of a hand is the height of ill manners and need not be excused on the ground of instructing the ignorant. A woman who might sincerely wish to play a better game does not care to be criticized and drilled in public, and the one giving information is a self-appointed teacher who is not desired.

At a bridge luncheon recently the players at one table were amused to hear at the completion of every hand a lecture by one of the guests. The woman who talked played well—all admitted that—but the afternoon was not a class in card playing. It was a social meeting where each woman was supposed to stand upon the merits of her game. The woman who did the talking was not disagreeable, nor did she select one person for her victim. Impartially she instructed the whole table, with the result that when she had gone at the end of the afternoon those remaining later declared that she had almost spoiled their game.

The correct thing for her to have done was to remain quiet, no matter how poor the playing of others might be. If she were asked any questions as to what to do she might have answered briefly and courteously, but she should have remembered that the afternoon was one of relaxation and amusement, not of instruction.

The woman who loses her temper with her partner commits an unpardonable breach of good manners. No is it enough to control the tongue alone at such times. Manner as well must be courteous, and one who cannot regard these dictates of good breeding should never play cards.

Automobile Etiquette.

It looks unconventional for a young girl to go automobiling with several young men unless they are relatives, for somehow it is suggestive of a "sporty" tendency on her part, and so the one girl in a group of men is never quite as delicately treated by the world as is the maid who has somebody of her own sex in her company. Therefore, all things considered, the chaperon is a useful personage, and if she is a good deal older than the rest

The Pure Food Law.

Secretary Wilson says: "One of the objects of the law is to inform the consumer of the presence of certain harmful drugs in medicines." The law requires that the amount of chloroform, opium, morphine, and other habit forming drugs be stated on the label of each bottle. The manufacturers of Merial Cough Remedy have always claimed that their remedy did not contain any of these drugs, and the truth of this claim is now fully proven, as no mention of them is made on the label. This remedy is not only one of the safest but one of the best in use for coughs and colds. Its value has been proven beyond question during the many years it has been in general use. Proper dress for motoring depends upon the excursion itself, whether taken in town or in the country or if the trip is to be long or short. For wear in town the coquettish little bonnets with wide strings and also rosettes or flowers sometimes accompany the daintiest dinner frocks, for the spin may come after dinner in a restaurant, but over the gown must go a rajah or pongee coat cut with kimono sleeves and fastened smartly at the waist with two huge buttons of gilt or white embroidery. The long chiffon veil is a necessity for a smart look, and of course there are all sorts of glances designed especially for motor wear—bracelets, watches, brooches, hatpins, etc. The country getup, especially if there is to be a long spin, is less elegant, coats, hoods, gloves and veils all looking to a great extent as if designed purely for usefulness.

A Personal Reference.

Walter Emanuel is accounted the drollest man in literary circles. Once he was cutting on an editor and rose abruptly.

"I must not," he remarked, "occupy more of the time of a busy man."

"Not at all," exclaimed the editor, "I am always pleased."

Plainly came the rejoinder: "I was referring to myself."

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health Is Worth Saving, and Some Janesville People Know How To Save It

Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when all diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is a Janesville citizen's recommendation.

Charles W. Allen, R. F. D. No. 8, Janesville, Wis., says:—"I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and can recommend them as a remedy that can be relied upon. I suffered from kidney trouble for a long time and although I tried various remedies, I received no relief. Finally I procured Doan's Kidney Pills and began their use. In a few days my trouble disappeared and it has never returned."

NESTED IN A BEE HIVE.

An unusual sight was witnessed at West Ashby, near Horneston, England, where a wagtail built its nest in a bee hive and sat on ten eggs, despite the bees being busy at work below. The bird entered by the roof of the hive through a small hole. It carried quite a heap of hay and other material bit by bit through this hole, and made a cozy nest. The bees were by no means disturbed by their lodger.

BUSINESS COLLEGE STUDENTS AT ELABORATE SOCIAL EVENT

One Hundred and Twenty Five Present and Past Students Were Present At First Homecoming.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Monroe, Wis., Jan. 1.—The first homecoming of the past and present students of the Monroe Business Institute was held in K. of C. Hall, the event being celebrated by a banquet at 7 o'clock in the evening. There was such a splendid response to the notes of invitation that seating capacity at the banquet tables was insufficient. Over one hundred and twenty-five feasted and had a most enjoyable time. Miss Clara Fossendoff presided as toastmistress and responses were made by Prof. E. L. St. John, in the name of welcome. Prof. H. A. Rencan, and members of the class of 1911. The election of officers of the Annual followed the supper. The election was as follows: President, Marion Goetz; vice president, Jeanie Gullon; Secretary, Edward O'Meara; and Secretary, Elsie Hagan. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing and social intercourse. The success of the event is especially pleasing to the faculty. The homecoming was held in place of the regular Commencement last June, which was postponed until this date.

SERIOUS FALL.

E. A. Hoffman was rendered unconscious by a fall on an icy sidewalk while going to his home for dinner. In what manner he fell, he is unable to relate, but that his fall was severe is shown by the fact that he has an injury to his head and is unable to move about his body, which will compel him to give up his work for several days. He was unconscious until 12 o'clock in the evening.

SMALL BLAZE.

The explosion of an oil stove in the laundry at the home of Henry Solomon on Racine street, caused a small blaze and gave the firemen a cold run at 1 o'clock a. m. The blaze was quickly extinguished and the fire confined to the one room.

MINNEAPOLIS SHOWS ITS APPRECIATION

Is Delighted With Planes That Appeared in Janesville Very Recently.

Sturkow Ryder has been playing in Minneapolis with Oberholser's famous orchestra in a program of Russian music. The Gazette pronounced judgment on this brilliant artist, when she was here in November, and now takes reasonable pride in reproducing what the leading Minneapolis papers say of her.

The Tribune: "Sturkow Ryder is a young artist, but a true one, in delicate, soft variations of tone, beauty, color and purity of touch, her performance was delightful. The measures were enthusiastically demanded."

The News: "The Russian concert for piano and orchestra was a delight to hear, especially when the piano part was given with such force and romantic power as by Mrs. Sturkow Ryder. An Arensky study, as an enthusiastically beamed encore, was most admirable. May this first visit from such a delightful pianist be only the forerunner of a concert series."

Terrible Suffering

Eczema All Over Baby's Body.

"When my baby was four months old his face broke out with eczema, and at sixteen months of age his face, hands and arms were in a dreadful state. The eczema spread all over his body. We had to put a mask or cloth over his face and tie up his hands. Finally we gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a few months he was entirely cured. Today he is a healthy boy." Mrs. Lewis Lewis, Taring, Maine. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures blood diseases and builds up the system. Get it today in usual liquid form or chocolate tablets called Sarsatabs.

Five Million Dollars For Remembering a Name

It is estimated that Endicott, Johnson & Co. last year saved the shoe-buying public over three million dollars in the cost of their shoes.

That was only in the first cost—the price paid in the store. Now consider the longer life of the leather—the better wear of the shoe—two million dollars more is a conservative estimate.

That is five million dollars in the pockets of every-day citizens, instead of in the pockets of the leather trust and middlemen.

What did the citizens do to get this money? They simply remembered the name of the only shoe concern in this country that tans its own Cayley made no answer at all, but it Mr. Fanshaw hoped to find with those shrewd eyes of his, any look of guilt or consternation in the pale face that confronted him, he was disappointed.

Suddenly, he turned to his son: "Where is that thing that Donovin brought aboard with him just now?" he asked.

The blood-stained dart lay on the deck beside Tom's chair. He picked it up and held it out toward his father, but the older man, with a gesture, indicated to Cayley that he was to take it in his hand; then, "Jeanne, my dear," he asked, "will you fetch out from the cabin the stick which dropped from Mr. Cayley's belt last night?"

When she had departed on the errand, he spoke to Cayley: "You will observe that the butt of this dart is not notched, as it would have to be if it were shot from a bow."

He did not look at Cayley's face as he spoke, but at his hands. Could it be possible, he wondered, that those hands could hold the thing with that sinister brown stain upon it—the stain of Perry Hunter's blood—without trembling? They were steady enough, though, so far as he could see.

When Jeanne came out with the stick, he handed that to Cayley also. "You will notice," he said, "that that dart and the groove in this stick were evidently made for each other, Mr. Cayley."

The pupils of Jeanne's eyes dilated as she watched the accused man fit them together, and then balance the stick in his hand, as if trying to discover how it could be put so decidedly a use as Mr. Fanshaw had indicated. He seemed preoccupied by nothing more than a purely intellectual curiosity.

His coolness seemed to anger Mr. Fanshaw, as it had formerly angered his son. For a moment this sudden anger of his rendered him almost inarticulate. Then:

"We don't want a demonstration!" came like the explosion of a quick-firing gun. "And you have no need for trying experiments. You know how nicely that dart would fit in the groove that was cut for it. You know, altogether too well, what the stain is that discolors it. You know where we found that dart. You're only surprised that it was ever found at all—it and the body of the man it slew."

"Everything you say is perfectly true," said Cayley, very quietly. "I am surprised that the body of the man was ever recovered. I'm a little surprised, also, that you should think, because this stick fell from my belt last night, and this dart, which you found transfixing a man's throat this morning."

Tom Fanshaw interrupted him. His eyes were blazing with excitement. "It was not from us that you learned that that dart transfixed the murdered man's throat!" he cried.

"I knew it, nevertheless," said Cayley in that quiet voice, not looking toward the man he answered, but still keeping his eyes on old Mr. Fanshaw. "And also a little surprised," he went on, as if he had not been interrupted, "that you should think, because this stick and this dart fit together, that I am, necessarily, a murderer."

"You have admitted it now, at all events," Mr. Fanshaw replied. His voice grew quieter, too, as the intensity of his purpose steadied it. "I suppose that is because, upon this 'No-Man's-Land,' you are outside the pale of law and statute—beyond the jurisdiction of any court. I tell you this: I think we would be justified in giving you a trial and hanging you from that yard there. We will not do it. We will not even take you back to the states to prison. You may live out here and enjoy us, undisturbed, your freedom, such as it is, and your thoughts and your conscience, such as they must be. But if ever you try to return to the world of men—"

Cayley interrupted the threat before it was spoken: "I have no wish to return to the world of men," he said. "I wish the world were empty of men, as this part of it is, or as I thought it was. I abandoned mankind once before, but yesterday when I saw men here, I felt a stirring of the blood—the call of what was in my own veins. Last night when I took to the air again, after the hour I had spent on that ice-floe yonder, I thought I wanted to come back to my own kind; wanted, in spite of the past, to be one of them again. Perhaps it is well that I should be rid of that delusion so quickly. I am rid of it, and I am rid of you—bloody, sudden, stupid, blind."

"Yet, with all my horror of you, my disdain of you, I should not expect one of you to do murder, without some sort of motive, some paltry hope of gain, upon the body of a stranger. It is of that that you accuse me—"

"A stranger?" Tom Fanshaw echoed. "Why, when you confess to so much, do you try to lie at the end? You can't think we don't know that the man you murdered was once your friend—or thought he was, God help him! Why try to make us believe that Perry Hunter was a stranger to you?"

The girl's wide eyes had never left Cayley's face since the moment of her return to the deck with the throwing stick. Through it all—through Fanshaw's hot accusation, and his own reply—through those last words of Tom's, it had never changed. There had been contempt and anger in it, subdued by an iron self-control; no other emotions than those two, until the very end. Until the mention of that name—"Perry Hunter."

But at the sound of that name—just then, the girl saw his face go bloodless, not all at once, slowly, rather. And then after a little while he uttered a great sob; not of grief, but such a sob as both the Fanshaws had heard before, when, in battle or skirmish, a soft-nosed bullet smashes its way through some great, knotted nerve center. His hands went out in a convulsive gesture, both the stick and the dart which he held, falling from them, the stick at the girl's feet, the dart at his own. Then leaning back against the rail for support, he covered his face with his hands. At last, while they waited silently, he drew himself up straight and looked dazedly into her face.

Suddenly, to the amazement of the other two men, she crossed the deck to where he stood. "I'm perfectly sure, for my part, that you didn't do it; that you are not the murderer of Mr. Hunter. Won't you shake hands?"

He made no move to take hers, and though his eyes were turned upon her, he seemed to be looking through, rather than at her, so intense was his preoccupation.

Seeing that this was so, she laid her hand upon his forearm. "You didn't do it," she repeated, "but you know something about it, don't you? You saw it done, from a long way off—saw the murder, without knowing who its victim was."

"I might have saved him," he murmured brokenly. "If I had not hung aloft there too long, just out of curiosity; if they had been men to me instead of puppets. But when I guessed what their intent was, guessed that it was something sinister, it was done before I could interfere. I saw him going backwards over the brink of a fissure in the ice, tugging at a dart that was in his throat. And when they had gone—his murderers—"

"They?" she cried. "Was there more than one?"

"Yes," he said, "there was a party. There must have been ten or twelve at least. When they had gone I flew down and picked up that stick, which one of them had dropped—And to think I might have saved him!"

Her hand still rested on his arm. "I'm glad you told me," she said. She felt the arm stiffen suddenly at the sound of Tom Fanshaw's voice.

"Jeanne, take your hand away! Can you touch a man like that? Can you believe the lies—?" but there, with a premonitory gesture, his father silenced him.

But even he exclaimed at the girl's next action, for she stooped, picked up the blood-stained dart which lay at Philip Cayley's feet, and handed it to him. "Throw it away, please!"—she said, "overboard, and as far as you can."

Even before the other men cried out at his doing the thing she had asked him to, he hesitated and looked at her in some surprise.

"Do it, please," she commanded; "I ask it seriously."

Tom Fanshaw started out of his chair; then, as an intolerable twinge from his ankle stopped him, he dropped back again. His father moved quickly forward, too, but checked himself, the surprise in his face giving way to curiosity. At a general thing, Jeanne Folding knew what she was about.

Philip Cayley took the dart and threw it far out into the water.

There was one more surprise in store for the two Fanshaws. When Cayley, without a glance toward either of them, walked out on the upper landing of the accommodation ladder, the girl accompanied him, and, side by side with him, descended the little stairway, at whose foot the dinghy waited.

"You are still determined on that resolution of yours, are you, to abandon us all for the second time—all humankind, I mean? This later accusation against you was so easily disproved."

"Disproved?" he questioned. "That beautiful tale of yours can't be called proof."

"I meant just what I said—disproved. They shall admit it when I go back on deck. Won't you—won't you give us a chance to disbelieve the old story, too?"

"I can never explain that now," he said; "can never lay that phantom, never in the world."

"I am sorry," she said holding out her hand to him. "I wish you'd give us a chance. Goodbye."

This time he took the hand, bowed over it and pressed it lightly to his lips. Then, without any other farewell than that, he dropped down into the dinghy and was rowed back to the floe—back to his wings.

When he returned to the deck he found that Mr. Fanshaw had gone around to the other side of it to see the sky-man taken to the air.

But Tom sat, right, where he was. For the first time that he could remember, he was regarding her with open anger. "I knew," he said, "that you never liked Hunter, though I never could see why you should dislike him; and it didn't take two minutes to see that this man Cayley, with his wings and his romance, had fascinated you. But in spite of that, I thought you had a better sense of justice than you showed just now."

She flushed a little. "My sense of justice seems to be better than yours this morning, Tom," she answered quietly. Then she turned her back upon him, gazing out shoreward.

"I am getting worried about our shore party," she remarked, as if by way of discontinuing the quarrel. "If there are ten or twelve men living there, in hiding from us, willing to do unprovoked murder, when they can with impunity—"

"So you believed that part of the story, too, did you?" Tom interrupted. She did not answer his question at all, but turned her attention shoreward again.

A moment later she closed her binoculars with a snap, and walked around to the other side of the deck, where Mr. Fanshaw, leaning his elbows on the rail, was looking out across the ice-floe.

"Well," he asked briskly, as she came up and laid an affectionate arm across his shoulder, "I suppose you've been telling Tom why you did it—why you made Cayley throw that dart away, I mean; but you'll have to tell me, too. I can't figure it out. You had something in mind, I'm sure."

"I haven't been telling Tom," she said. "He doesn't seem in a very reasonable mood this morning. But I did have something in mind. I was proving that Mr. Cayley couldn't possibly be the man who had committed the murder."

"I suspected it was that," he said. "It's the stick that proves it really."

She said, "You remember how puzzled you were because the end of it which you held it by wouldn't fit your hand? I discovered why that was when you sent me in to get it a short while ago. It's a left-handed stick. It fits the palm of your left hand perfectly. You'll find that that is so when you try it. And Mr. Cayley is right-handed."

The old man nodded rather dubiously. "Cayley may be ambidextrous, for anything you know," he objected. She had her rejoinder ready: "But this stick, Uncle Jerry, dear, was made for a man who couldn't throw with his right hand, and Mr. Cayley can. He did it perfectly easily, and without suspecting at all why I wanted him to. Don't you see? Isn't it clear?"

"It's quite clear that the brains of this expedition are in that pretty head of yours," he said. "Yes, I think you're right." Then, after a pause, he added, with an enigmatical look at her: "Don't be too hard on Tom, my dear, because you see the circumstances are hard enough on him already."

She made a little gesture of impatience. "They're not half as hard on him as they are on Mr. Cayley." "Oh, I don't know," the old gentleman answered. "Take it by and large, I should say that Cayley was playing in luck."

The Skin and Not the Blood.

Until recently it has been a generally accepted proposition that eczema was a disease of the blood, and that in order to cure it, the blood must be purified and enriched by internal remedies. Careful experiments and scientific investigations have taught us that eczema is purely a skin disease, and curable through the skin alone. A great majority of persons afflicted with eczema have no other ailment, which is accepted as positive proof that it is purely a skin disease. Having established this fact, the chemists of the American Drug and Press Association set about to compound a prescription that would successfully cope with this disease, and after much investigating brought out Meritol Eczema Remedy, the effect of which is marvelous. If you are afflicted with this loathsome disease, do not delay trying Meritol Eczema Remedy. You will be surprised at its prompt action, its soothing effect and its permanent results. Reliable Drug Co. are commissioned by the association to sell it in Janesville.

WOMEN'S HAIR DESTROYED

Great Havoc Wrought by Women's Carelessness

Many women destroy the beauty of their hair through thoughtlessness or ignorance of certain facts. They do not shampoo their hair often enough, or too often. They use soaps or preparations which contain ingredients harmful to the scalp and hair.

As a result of such treatment dandruff is created, the hair loosens, loses color, falls out, and baldness commences, unless proper and prompt precautions are taken in time. Then again, microbes and certain diseases bring about unhealthy scalp and hair conditions.

Most people can rid themselves of dandruff and prevent diseased scalp and hair conditions, if they will use the right remedy. We have that remedy, and we will positively guarantee that it will eradicate dandruff and prevent baldness or it will not cost the user anything.

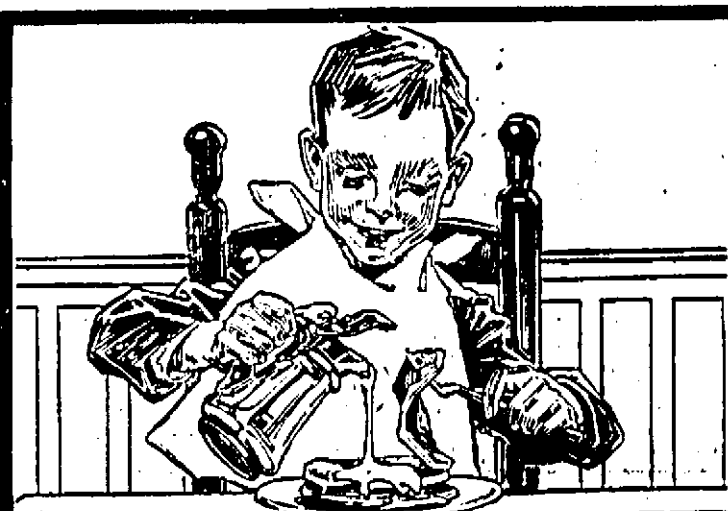

That's a pretty broad statement but we will back it and prove it with our own money. Rexall "33" Hair Tonic is the remedy that will grow hair and overcome scalp and hair troubles. It will grow hair even on bald heads, unless all life in the hair roots has been extinguished, the follicles closed, and the scalp is glazed and shiny. It gets its name from the fact that it grew hair in 93 out of 100 cases, where it received a thoroughly hard, impartial and practical test.

We want you to try Rexall "33" Hair Tonic at our risk. You surely cannot lose anything by doing so, while you have everything to gain. You would better think this over, and then come in and see us about this offer. You will be well repaid for your visit to our store. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00.
